

CONTENTS

Contributors to this Issue	v
----------------------------------	---

PART I. SEMIOTICS AND BIBLICAL STUDIES YESTERDAY AND TODAY

1. Critical Biblical Studies from a Semiotic Perspective Daniel Patte, Vanderbilt University, Nashville, U.S.A	3
2. Orientations of a Literary Semiotics Questioned by the Bible Jean Delorme, Université Catholique, Lyon, France	27
3. From Biblical Text to Literary Enunciation and its Subject Louis Panier, Université Catholique, Lyon, France	63
4. From Linguistic Methodology to the Discovery of a World of Metaphors René Kieffer, University of Uppsala, Sweden	77
5. From Historical-Critical Exegesis to Greimassian Semiotics: A Christological Issue, The Meaning of Jesus' Death Olivette Genest, Université de Montréal, Canada	95

PART II. SEMIOTIC STUDIES OF BIBLICAL TEXTS

6. John the Baptist's Head—The Word Perverted: A Reading of a Narrative (Mark 6:14–29) Jean Delorme, Université Catholique, Lyon, France	115
7. A Fresh Look at the Garden of Eden Mary Phil Korsak, European Society of Women for Theological Research, Brussels, Belgium	131
8. "Like One of Us, Knowing ʔôb and raʕ " (Gen 3:22) Walter Vogels, St. Paul University, Ottawa, Canada	145
9. The Creation of Coherence Ellen van Wolde, Tilburg Faculty of Theology, The Netherlands	159

III. RESPONSES

10. Response from the Philippines to Some of the Semeia Articles
Renate Rose, with Revelation Velunta, *Union
Theological Seminary, Dasmariñas, Philippines* 177
11. On the Semiotic Reading of Genesis 1-3:
A Response from Argentina
J. Severino Croatto, *Instituto Superior Evangélico
de Estudio Teologicos (ISEDET), Buenos Aires, Argentina* 187

